STRIKE Action

On Tuesday 13th November, teachers will once again strike to see if we can get our government to value teachers and the resources they need to ensure your child/ren get the best possible education they deserve.

We honestly would not be doing this unless we truly believed in what is needed. Teachers have so much to achieve at this time of the year and it is also a short term, so every day in the classroom is valued. But things cannot carry on as they are. The Kamo Primary School Board of Trustees approves the school not being open for the school day of 13th

November. The Kamo KidZone Programme service will be available for customers. Once again we do hope our government is listening, as I hear from our teachers and teachers across the country that we will continue to strike if needs are not met.
